

BRICK LANE MUSIC HALL

Late morning, we make our way to London's Dockyard to The Home of the British Music Hall for an afternoon of hilarious entertainment with their annual pantomime for grown ups, Pinocchio and his Wooden Whopper. The only permanent home for the music hall, Brick Lane Music Hall is a totally unique venue, the brainchild of Vincent Hayes MBE, the result of a dream to keep music hall alive in this country. Having come to love music hall as a performer, Vincent saw its enduring value as a form of entertainment and believed that it could appeal to today's audiences, that it could move with the times and appeal to modern audiences with topical humour and familiar songs. Our matinee performance includes a delightful afternoon tea, served during the interval.
